

Transaction Completed by Chesapeake Financial Settlements, LLC is Highlighted in Wall Street Journal Article

Rockville, MD, November 27, 2007 – The November 26, 2007 issue of The Wall Street Journal ran a front page article on the life settlement industry. The article, titled “An Insurance Man Builds A Lively Business in Death”, detailed the inception and growth of life settlement provider Coventry First, LLC, outlined the various industry participants, and discussed the opportunities and challenges facing this emerging market.

The article also provided the perspective of a satisfied policy owner that recently utilized the life settlement market to meet his current financial planning needs. Steve Ellis, a Chesapeake Financial Settlements, LLC (Chesapeake) client, shared with The Wall Street Journal how the settlement of policies he owned on his mother allowed him to complete construction on his new home. Although the policies had a current cash surrender value of $0, he accepted an offer obtained by Chesapeake for $205,000 on the $2 million in death benefit.

Chesapeake was the only life settlement broker to have a client and their transaction featured in the article. “I welcomed the opportunity to discuss my experience with Chesapeake so hopefully more policy owners will learn about the life settlement option,” offered Mr. Ellis.
